Honors English III

Mr. Josh Sertich

COURSE SYLLABUS

Course Description:

Honors English III includes the study of American literature, and its relationship to American history, examining how prose has evolved and changed over time, and what cultural factors are responsible for those changes. Various forms of American literature will be examined to acquaint the students with different themes and concepts, including novels, plays, short stories, essays, and poems. In response to the literature being studied, students will write a number of literary analysis papers as well as a historical research paper. Students will also focus on persuasive writing in preparation for the PSAT test. Grammar, spelling, and vocabulary will also be included to reinforce all writing skills.

Note: This is a writing intensive course.

Course Objectives:

Upon the successful completion of this course, students will be able to:

- analyze, compare, and evaluate various works of literature
- understand that effective authors of fiction, nonfiction, and poetry carefully consider their stylistic choices as they pertain to purpose and audience
- demonstrate serious engagement with the readings through close reading and analytical writing
- express analysis and practice writing skills through academic writing assignments and in-class essays
- apply spelling, proofreading, basic grammatical and editing skills to augment their writing
- improve their vocabulary skills primarily in the context of the literature
- develop and apply the study and research skills necessary for academic success
- develop and apply oral and presentation skills
- develop and apply listening skills
